

CAVE-MAN NEGRO LANDS IN JAIL

Young Lochinvar Stunt of Ethiopian Gets Him
Into a Muddle.

Y. K. Woods of Little Africa had an idea and it got him in jail.

His quest for the hand of Miss Lettie Jackson met with small favor and yesterday she went to the office of County Attorney J. P. Evers and swore to an information charging him with cave man tactics. She declares he is trying to compel her to marry him against her will.

To substantiate her claim Lettie showed the county attorney a most unusual epistle chucked full of love for the one who spurned him and burning with passion.

The letter follows:

"Dear Sweetheart: This is the second time I have wrote to you and I haven't received any answer yet. Why do you treat me so mean? Darling, I don't believe you really care anything for me; if so, you don't act as if you didn't. You know I will do anything in this world for you and yet you treat me as if I was a dog. I want you to stop keeping company with so many of these barefoot boys. I want you for myself and I am going to have you if it cost me my life. Of course I am very old, perhaps too old for you, but I can do more for you than the young boys who you take up time with. I am going to tell the boys you go with a few things, then none of them will notice you and they you will have to fall back on an old man who loves you so well he will do anything to get you. I will kill anyone that tries to take you from me."

"Your future husband, Y. K. W."

The fervent Romeo is in jail.

HOLD REHEARSALS FOR SCHOOL PLAY

"You Never Can Tell" Is
Title of High School
Seniors' Skit.

Rehearsals are being held nightly on the play to be given by the senior class of Tulsa high school at Convention hall Monday, May 29, and indications are that it will be the best amateur production ever presented in Tulsa. Other events of commencement week are complete and the seniors are now winding up their scholastic affairs.

There will be one more week of actual school after this week for seniors. Beginning with the senior play Monday, May 29, commencement week will extend to Friday. During this time the rest of the school will be taking final examinations, all seniors with an average of G being exempt from them.

"You Never Can Tell" is the play to be given by the seniors and it is one of the best works of George Bernard Shaw, the celebrated English dramatist. It is being directed by Miss Theodora Pottle, head of the music not reach Mexico City for several days and the reply from General Carranza is not expected at the embassy until the war minister's report has been received.

War and state department advisers showed no change today in the situation in Mexico or along the border. While press reports have told of several raids of a minor character at various points in the last few days, General Funston either has been unable to confirm these stories or has thought them too unimportant to bring to the attention of the war department.

Administration officials continue to express confidence that the force now under General Funston's command will be able to protect the border in such fashion that repetitions of the Green Springs raid will be impossible unless there is a general all-American outbreak beyond the border in which Carranza troops participate. There is nothing to indicate the likelihood of such an event. On the contrary, all official advisers at hand indicate that Carranza forces are being disposed to prevent raiding across the line by irresponsible outlaws.

Was Their Agreement?

General Funston's new plan for coordinating the work of the border guards was regarded in some quarters here as tending to confirm intimations that an unwritten agreement as to steps to be taken had been reached by the El Paso conference. If the plan includes an exchange of information as to hostile activities between responsible officers of the Carranza troops and the American commander, it was thought here considerable progress could be made without the troops of either government crossing the line. No official would admit, however, that a plan of action had been agreed upon by the conferees.

General Scott probably will confer at length with Secretary Baker tomorrow and later with Secretary Lansing. No time had been set tonight, however, for these interviews. There is no need for haste in the formulation of a protocol, it is felt by officials here, if General Pershing's force is not to engage in active operations beyond the line.

The war department has had no advice mentioning Villa's name for many days. Some officers are inclined to believe that he either is dead or has slipped away into hiding to recuperate from serious wounds. At the moment he has ceased to be a factor in the border situation, whatever part he may play in the future.

temporary chairman and other officers of the convention and their assistants and members of the Republican national committee will occupy seats on the spectators' platform at the south end of the coliseum. Back of the spectators' platform will be two thousand seats for distinguished guests. On either side of the spectators' platform will be the 558 seats for working newspaper men. The delegates will occupy the space directly in front of the spectators' stand and back of them will be the alternates. The rest of the space on the main floor will be reserved for visitors.

The committee had had tickets printed for six days session.

today's meeting and a vote might have been taken had it not been for the unavoidable absence of Senators Cummins and Shields. There are 18 members of a committee, ten Democrats and eight Republicans. All of the Republicans are opposed to confirmation. Two Democrats are said to be strongly against it and two favor a report without recommendation. These two are urging the compromise for which the other Democrats may have to vote to prevent adverse action.

Such a course would mean a long fight in the senate. Administration leaders tonight predicted that the struggle would end in confirmation of Mr. Brandeis, and one Republican leader, who is opposed to the nomination, said he expected that this would be the result, anticipating that the president would continue to urge confirmation as he did in his recent letter to the judiciary committee.

During the closing months of the great Civil War many societies sprang into existence among the veterans. These were mostly of a local character, having for their objects the recognition of the services of the man who had gone to the front of the civil war, and the work in the service for the United States. The Missouri veterans organized the "Advance Guard of America," and both east and west "The Boys in Blue" clubs were mustered, mostly for immediate campaign work in the scramble for offices. One of the strongest was the "Conservative Army & Navy League," which was composed mostly of commissioned officers. Veterans of the various divisions of the army and fleets of the sea fighters hurriedly organized their associations. Many of these organizations went so far as to announce nominations for local offices, but they were generally allowed to disband as soon as the political campaigns were over.

How It Was Formed.

On April 6, 1888, at Decatur, Ill., Dr. B. F. Stephenson, assisted by a number of his army comrades, completed plans for a broader and more permanent organization, secured a charter from the state of Illinois, and called it, "The Grand Army of the Republic." The basic declaration of this society were: True allegiance to the United States of America; fraternity of comrades; help and support of the needy comrades and the care of and assistance and education of the widows and wards of their late comrades. The motto was fraternity, charity and loyalty. The early career of this society partook largely of the same political characteristics as most of the others and it soon became apparent to the promoters that if it ever lived to be of practical benefit to the veterans they must eliminate all appearance of politics.

At a meeting of delegates from all of these societies at Indianapolis in 1867, rules were revised with the view of eliminating all semblance of political influences. This followed a like meeting held in Pittsburgh, which was not in the humor for the broader view of the work and objects of the organization. In 1869 a rule was adopted which absolutely prohibited "all discussions of political or partisan questions at any meeting of any post of the Grand Army of the Republic."

Is Nonpolitical.

Since that time the officers of this organization have belonged to any and all political parties. Thus the Grand Army of the Republic has long since outgrown the mistakes of its infancy. It has been devoting its energies to the cultivation of that fraternity which has drawn together and cemented the members of this the greatest and grandest association of soldiers and sailors ever formed since history began. It has been the practical exemplification of charity to the distressed, and its work along the patriotic education of the rising generations has been such as to be recognized by the great men of this and other nations. Not only has it frowned on any personal animosities against those who wrongfully arrayed themselves against their country and its flag, but it has sought to more deeply impress upon the rising generations the important lessons to be drawn from the history of the past, and which have so indelibly impressed upon the heart of the nation at such great cost of life and treasure—that the highest duty of the citizen is loyalty to his country and its flag.

State Organization.

The provisional department of Oklahoma, Grand Army of the Republic, was organized at Guthrie in 1889, the first department encampment being held at Guthrie in 1890, when Governor C. M. Barnes was chosen department commander. Other encampments were held and commanders chosen as follows: Kingfisher, 1891, G. M. Coulton; Oklahoma City, 1892, Dan Wyatt; El Reno, 1893, T. N. Soward; Guthrie, 1894, J. P. Cummins; Perry, 1895, H. H. Trooper; Enid, 1896, W. H. Catter; Homestead, 1897, C. R. Young; Shawnee, 1898, Dr. G. M. HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"Little pimples appeared on my baby's head and they itched awfully and he would scratch them until they would bleed and finally they made sore eruptions as large as a silver dollar. The more I did for them, the larger and angrier they got. My baby cried and could not sleep."

"I saw a Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertisement and I purchased some. I used the Cuticura Soap for bathing him and then rubbed on the Ointment and a few applications healed him. They seemed to help his hair too, and now it is in perfect condition." (Signed) Mrs. C. W. Williams, 70 Chestnut Ave., Carrollton, Ga., July 24, 1915.
